Other Company-Provided Equipment and Business Communications

The Company may provide drivers with other equipment and access to Company communication systems to be used primarily for business purposes. Company equipment and communication systems may be equipped with software that might allow the Company and the third-party software administrator visibility into applications used by employees on the Company-owned equipment and communication systems. All equipment issued to an employee, or communications shared over business accounts (including email, instant messaging, group chat, and similar systems) by the Company is Company property and must be used only in a manner authorized by the Company. Employees who are given access to a Company email address or other Company-owned communication application to use for business purposes will be permitted to use those applications for personal purposes during nonworking time, provided such use does not violate applicable law or Company policy (including, but not limited to, our policies on discrimination and unlawful harassment). Any Company-issued equipment must be returned when specified by an employee's supervisor. Employees have no reasonable expectation of privacy when using Company-issued equipment or when utilizing the Company's communication systems. Employees who misuse, misappropriate, or damage any Company-issued property, including using Company-provided equipment for non-business reasons, will be subject to disciplinary action up to and including termination of employment.

Employees also must adhere to Company policies, including the Company's Rules of Conduct Policy, Social Media Policy guidelines, and EEO, Non-Discrimination and Non-Harassment Policy, when utilizing the
